VIA DOLOROSA

... script by Clem Arnold

From his judgment seat Pilate looked over the seething crowd as they poured into the courtyard. The courtyard was like a boiling cauldron inflamed with the fever of hysteria.

CRUCIFY HIM! CRUCIFY HIM! CRUCIFY HIM!
Pilate ordered the captain to triple the guard. He could no longer control.

There could be a riot. Pilate had to shout to be heard.

"This man is innocent. He does not deserve to die!"

The mob's response was instant and savage.

CRUCIFY HIM! CRUCIFY HIM!

Prantic and confused, Pilate searched the faces of Jesus for an answer - any answer. The roar of the crowd continued to hold much longer. Then Pilate smiled and ordered a servant to bring him a basin of water. He had found a way to appease his mind. He would let have the death of an innocent man on his conscience. Pilate dipped his hands into the water and bellowed above the roar:

"I am innocent of this man's blood. Crucify Him yourselves."

The crowd reached the height of frenzy. Pilate turned to Jesus.

"The decision was yours, Israel. Then Pilate ordered his soldiers to take charge of Jesus. They led him to the Praetorium and gathered the whole Roman company around Him. They stripped Jesus of the rags He wore, put a scarlet robe on Him, then wove a crown of briar thorns and set it on His head. One soldier put a reed staff in Jesus' right hand. Another prodded Jesus against a column while the soldiers knelt in front of Jesus and danced around Him mocking Him and calling Him a "king." Their scorn turned to anger. The soldiers began to beat Jesus over the head with the reed staff. They spat in His face, stripped Him, then threw Him over a couch and flogged Him. After they had finished flogging Jesus, they put His clothes back on Him. The captain of the guard dropped the cross on Jesus' shoulder and ordered Him to walk. Staggering under the weight of the cross, Jesus stumbled into the crowd. He spoke to those who would curse Him, weep over Him, or look at Him with stunned, hollow silence. Jesus blinked the sweat and blood from His eyes and started walking to Calvary down the road of suffering . . . down the Via Dolorosa.
